"In a recent interview with The Fader, Grooveshark's Chris Lambert admitted that the company was out of "options" and that paying a new label (Scandipop) as a way to raise money was an option for the company." "In fact, that seemed to be a pretty strong theme, based on recent announcements and activity. Grooveshark, which has been available for years and was the poster child of the 'We just want to listen to music' crowd, was simply out of options. The label agreements that had been in place weren't working, and it seems that negotiations with Sony were stalled. Grooveshark couldn't make any money off its existing deals, and was basically shut out of those that were coming online. So the company was left on the outside looking in, and eventually found itself without a CEO, without a viable business model, and in a situation that appeared hopeless." This is not a standalone, it require f-droid and have a popup which is a problem because you cant see it and the popup is default of popup from playing application. And if your mobile phone have popup control, the popup goes away which means you cant listen songs in the app. This is a pure piracy app. Do not install it.

Q: How to find which setting is causing GTK error? For example, this: `Widget: set_property (window main_window, background_color)`

Error:

`gtk_widget_set_background_color: The type Widget was not found in GdkColors` How do I find out which Widget corresponds to GdkColors? How to correct it? A:
