It was owned and run by the former drummer in The Wonder Stuff, Stefan Forsberg. After Forsberg died in a motorbike crash in 1994, the label was left in a precarious financial situation. One of their final signings to the label was the Bristol band Jaded Heart, but the ensuing financial problems forced the band to leave the label in 1997. Corsica Records' two biggest successes were with the debut albums from the Swedish band Mew and the UK band The Wonder Stuff. However, they have had other artists as well, and in 2004 it was repositioned as a dance/world music label. In 2007, the label switched from a pressing plant (SODRAC) to a distribution facility with Universal Music.
