I'm writing a rather simple game in Java, and to start off, I'm using an Activity as a game controller. Before, I was using the AndroidActivity class, but it's either deprecated or something like that. The game logic is stored in objects and has no UI. This just seemed like a good place to start and it's worked out well so far. However, I have a MainActivity which contains the game and a Play button. When the Play button is clicked, a dialog is shown. When the dialog is dismissed, I am getting an illegal state exception on a line that looks like the following: MainActivity.this(getApplicationContext()).get f30f4ceada
