Field of the Invention The present invention relates to a biological tissue, especially to a biological tissue having excellent flexibility, elasticity and biocompatibility, and capable of being deformed and sustained as the biological tissue is stretched or contracted. 2. Description of the Related Art It is the usual practice to manufacture biological tissues having excellent flexibility, elasticity and biocompatibility by the use of non-woven fabrics of polyester fibers. For example, porcine small intestine submucosa (SIS), ureter, and lymph node tissues are manufactured from such non-woven fabrics. The non-woven fabrics are stretchable along the longitudinal direction of the fibers as the biological tissues are stretched, but retain their length along the transverse direction of the fibers. Thus, conventional non-woven fabrics are defective in that they are not capable of being deformed and sustained as the biological tissues are stretched or contracted. To the contrary, the non-woven fabrics have a disadvantage that they are not elastic. To solve the above-described problems, it has been proposed to manufacture a polymer-laminated non-woven fabric as a biological tissue substitute. However, the polymer-laminated non-woven fabric has a drawback that it has limited flexibility because the polymer has low flexibility. U.S. Pat. No. 3,617,715 to Kohyama discloses a biocompatible fabric made of polyester fiber non-woven fabric and

I want to check that all there operations succeed and throw some error if one of them failed. So in my component's template I have something like this: `ngOnInit() { this.getAll().subscribe((data) => { // do some stuff }) }` And the `getAll(): Observable { // query to the datasource return this.db.getAll(); }` Currently the template is like this: `{{ error }} {{ data }}` I want to check that there are no errors and data returned by "getAll()" call before displaying my template. A: You can use `combineLatest(). getAll(): Observable { return this.db.getAll().combineLatest(() => Observable.of(undefined), (errors, data) =>!errors && data); }` As stated in the angular doc, this will emit only if all observables have finished successfully, or if one has failed.
