More detail...Melkite Greek Catholic Patriarch of Jerusalem Ignatius Joseph III Younan has said that the international community needs to be vigilant in the face of the threat posed by Islamic State terrorists operating in northern Lebanon and Iraq. Addressing the Patriarchal Church of Antioch's general meeting in Paris on April 16, Younan remarked that he is “pained by the facts of today [wherein] we are witnessing an unprecedented global crisis.” The “root of these crises” lies in “the escalating and global influence of Islamic fundamentalism,” he said, stressing that terrorists groups affiliated to the Muslim extremist ideology are “clearly seeking to destabilise the region.”Q: Regular expression for a specific text I have a html document that follows this format: First Line Second Line Third Line Fourth Line Fifth Line Sixth Line Seventh Line Eighth Line I need a regular expression to extract all the lines (from the sixth Line to the Eighth Line) except the first line and the last line. So the output would be as follows: Second Line Third Line Fourth Line Fifth Line Sixth Line Seventh Line Eighth Line A: The following regex should do it: `\S*\s*\S*` which stands for all chars until "the last line". You can simplify the regex for readability by removing the unnecessary escaping. Description: `\S*` is a shortcut for the regex "anything but a newline character" is a shortcut for "start the match in a line that contains is the first char of a paragraph and 09e8f5149f

Q: Rails 3, Engines, Custom Login I'm trying to set up a private rails app for a client, which will have separate front-end, admin and user interfaces. I'd like each of these to have their own logins. I'm currently stumped by how to manage the login process. I'm using a devise gem and have set up a separate controller for the admins, but the users/sign_up is part of the devise's resources controller (devise/sessions_controller). So, if I navigate to www.domain.com/users/sign_up - while the user is logged in as admin, then I'm presented with the admin login screen. However, if I try to register a different user, I get redirected to the devise/sessions_controller as if I was logged in as user@domain.com. This seems to ignore that I am not logged in and just assumes I am. I'd prefer to be able to have two different logins with two separate controllers for each - one for users and one for admins. As I said, I'm stumped by the correct approach. Any pointers, would be appreciated.

A: You're confusing the login part of devise to the registration part. You can set up two different controllers for the same resource with the same controller acting as both In your config/routes.rb

map.resources :users
map.resources :admins

For each controller you'll get a path that will look like /users/login, /users/sign_in and /users/sign_up for your user, admin and registration controllers, respectively. You can also have your login/registration view within views/users If the resource is users (or a singularized version), you can also use /users/sign_in and /users/sign_up for your login and registration methods, respectively, in your controller. It's an important distinction between controller and action. In
