Mr. and Mrs. Smith (Theatrical). After five (or six) years of vanilla bliss, ordinary suburbanites John and Jane Smith are stuck in a rut the size of . Complete monotony. They have absolutely no interests, except to fall asleep every night with the same woman, without trying to somehow diversify her. But one morning, a phone call rings in their house, which changes everything. At the other end of the wire, they are told that they have a son. They naturally want to get rid of him. But it was not there! Their boy has great genius potential! Only here's the problem: all his thought processes are based on one thing - sex.
