We introduce a framework to study quantum Brownian motion in dissipative environments, focusing on the out-of-equilibrium case. We show that the effective master equation describing the time evolution of the density matrix has the form of a Lindblad equation, but where the Lindblad operators turn out to be fully time-dependent. We discuss in detail the effect of relaxation and dephasing rates on the dynamics of the system. We also discuss the interplay between dissipation, dephasing and phase damping terms.
