working cheats for popular online games. Phase-selective detection of selective binding of nonplanar aromatic ligands to DNA. Most current methods of investigation of structure and function of biomacromolecules rely on the immobilization of these macromolecules. Here, DNA (dA-T-dT-dA) was covalently bound to a gold substrate via a thiol-gold bond and imaged by scanning tunneling microscopy (STM). The reversible association of a 1,5-benzodiazepine or a 1,3,5-triazine to the DNA was observed by the differential enhancement of the STM image of the immobilized DNA. The results demonstrate that nonplanar ligands with a pi-orbital overlap are capable of interacting with DNA and indicating a phase selectivity. The binding of the ligands to the immobilized DNA was easily imaged and quantitated by STM. The results presented here demonstrate that STM can be a useful technique for the detection of selective binding of functional groups to immobilized
