Make greeting cards at home, learn typing, do a newsletter, create a scrapbook, start a business,Â .Q: Two logical AND conditions in an SQL query I know that AND conditions are represented by an AND, AND NOT by an OR. I'm quite new to SQL and can't find a solution to this expression: WHERE (someuser.username='test1' AND someuser.useremail='test2') OR (someuser.username='test1' AND someuser.useremail='test2') How can I get the same result with the following statement? (someuser.username='test1' AND someuser.useremail='test2') AND (someuser.username='test1' AND someuser.useremail='test2') A: You're currently asking the query to return all rows where either the username is test1 and the email is test2 or the username is test1 and the email is test2. The first expression, someuser.username = 'test1' AND someuser.useremail = 'test2' tells SQL Server that this condition is true, and the second expression will be evaluated only if the first condition is true. To get the desired result, you want to ask the query to return all rows where both conditions are true. The following is the query you're looking for: SELECT * FROM mytable WHERE (someuser.username = 'test1' AND someuser.useremail = 'test2') OR (someuser.username = 'test1' AND someuser.useremail = 'test2') A: Any of the following will work: ... WHERE (someuser.username = 'test1' AND someuser.useremail = 'test2') OR... ... WHERE (someuser.username = 'test1' AND someuser.useremail = 'test2') AND... ... WHERE (someuser.username = 'test1' AND someuser.useremail = 'test e79caf774b
