What's new:

Tribune The Lostria Tribune (formerly the Quiraing Tribune) is a history website and publication, centred around the member blogs and micro-publishers of the Old Quiraing History Forum (formerly the Quiraing Tribune). The Lostria website is focused around the publication of a monthly historical and biographical journal called the Lostria Tribune. The Lostria Tribune is set in a fantasy world of Maimed(tm), a nature based primary fantasy setting with similarities to medieval, late-historic and alternate-history worlds. Each issue also features a series of short fiction and fantasy novels linked to the monthly editorial. This publication is set at a time in the history of the world, six generations after an unnamed global disaster/cataclysm with one world still in ruins and another intact. 'All' of the surviving population are immortal individuals, literal born-again freewheeling adventurers, either from the Golden Age of mankind (the Age of Silver) in which light-based technology is advancing rapidly and there is little need for kinetic power to survive in a solar-based solar system, or the Metal Age of mankind (the Age of Bronze) in which there is greater need for escape from damage or personal injury by combat. The Age of Silver came to an abrupt and violent conclusion after humans postulated an inherently unstable singularity in the Universe-in an equalising and self-diminishing transitory aftermath, causality collapsed to a single simultaneous and divergent state of temporal and genetic entropy which remained static and random for centuries before evolving in a very short period of time into a whole new generation of 'newborns'. The effect of this event was devastatingly catastrophic across both planets in the Solar System. There were no survivors from the 'perfect storm', cities were destroyed, radiation from the formation of this singularity redistributed widely and in different rotational polarities in the local solar system, radiating causality into the past and future. No information as to the exact cause of the singularity has ever been gained. There may have been an oppressive external force triggered internally by the sheer energy reserves of the singularity-producing humans with superior genetic traits are able to handle/withstand greater energy reserves than their plainer, slower, often mutant, contemporaries. In consequence, the children born into this Solar System from this 'perfect storm' of energy are born with great and powerful potential-amongst others, the ability to adopt and adopt all manner of skill or form for circumventing cruel

System Requirements For CAT Interstellar:

As it is an older version of the engine, we recommend some previous version of the game as minimum to play the mod with standard update. Those who have problems with the game might try to update it before launching the mod. The Steam version of the mod may require some updates to run as it may require the latest version of the game. Steam may not support the mod fully as we haven't updated it with the latest Steamworks. However it will still work and the mod is designed with a compatibility with the Steamworks features (TESV > The
