I finally caught up with Fast Eddy Grant at Sam Smith's this year, finally having seen The Good Cop before, and it was great fun to catch up with him and listen to him talk about events in the past few years. It's still just under £20 but if you've found yourself with the rest of the week to do something to get yourself in, this is the place to be. I've only just woken up to the news but I think it's going to be a great year for women in comedy, and at the very least, a very interesting one. There are just so many great shows and I'm excited to have been chosen as one of the judges at the Funniest Women at Edinburgh Festival Awards this year - it's a really prestigious award but it's a really great opportunity to raise awareness of the work of other incredible women working in comedy and I'm very honoured to be asked to be involved. I know there are a lot of other great performers nominated this year and I'm looking forward to seeing what the panel come up with. This is particularly relevant to stand-ups because comedy clubs are really diverse places now so it's important that events like this raise awareness of the great work of female performers and continue to grow the female population in comedy. The Funny Women section of the festival is a great part of the line-up at Sam Smith's this year and it's exciting to see such a range of female performers including Ignatia and veteran stars like Sue Perkins and Catherine Tate, taking their turns on the stage. I've seen Catherine Tate do some stand-up - she's not my favourite but she's a great talent, and I'm really looking forward to catching up with her. I think she's particularly good on panel shows.
