Thanks for playing! Now you can play Raptor Valley on your mobile devices! A powerful mobile game engine now available for free! Raptor Valley is a highly customizable game engine, available as a free download for Android and iOS, designed to be fast, powerful, and easy-to-use. Raptor Valley is a web app written with HTML5, Javascript, and CSS3. It uses the Unity game engine for mobile devices. The original Raptor Valley game engine is built with a built-in game editor and over 200 game components, giving you a fast and easy way to create your own games and share them with the world! Works on all iOS devices and on Android devices with Unity 5.x (No longer compatible with Unity 5.3). Soundtrack Explore your world with electronic sounds created by Sean Stein, a composer who was inspired by sounds found in nature. You are an alien stowaway. Blast your way out of a cargo ship and escape the suspicious eye of your enemies. Help the Ninja Warriors survive a mysterious planet and defeat the evil demon king who captured them. ChaosStar is a first person, action and adventure game, which will get you into a sci-fi universe. You will have to free the warriors, by collecting the greatest weapons known to man. Finally, with their help you will discover the mystery of the planet. Movement System The movement system of ChaosStar is a mix of two main types of games: full physics like Mortal Kombat, and wireframe like Spore. In ChaosStar, you will need to use your sword to perform many actions in the game. The abilities can be augmented, making the player stronger and more powerful, or can be damaged and weakened, causing the player to be slower and weaker. All abilities are currently available in four categories (Strength, Speed, Stamina and Defense). Death is not as easy as it seems in this game. Your character will die and must restart the battle from a particular checkpoint

What's new in Ephemera:

) Dave Paich DEAD RINGERS, TOTO, BLUE RAY, THIERRY ZOLET)
Grope Dragoon (AIX-LA-CHAPELLE, FRANCE) What was your first concert? "Ponche Tesoro" I bought directly at the Lumiere Festival in 1980, and the day I was eighteen, and owning a Guinness, sharing a joint and a Diorite Warhol portrait, at a record shop, we listened to the opening of the show by a local group, the Barbarians Without Being Barbarians. We were dancing and singing and chanting. Then the doors opened; the Lumiere Festival was transformed into a freaky and magnificent circus. There were the infamous Bon Universel Space Cake, Zoolounge and Josephine Baker's Magic Carpet. I was part of a group of Caliban brothers: Zartan, with my brother and two pals from the north-west: on the popcorn, a good bunch of pothead enthusiasts. They had pretty good vision and could hear well: I was "prone to growling and trembling" [2]. We made an entrance for them, we were putting their minds out of focus, to see the stage. The show was spectacular: lighting constructions, costumes; animations. Everything vibrated, we were immersed in the show with this gang. The only one we could not fit in with was Big Jim you know: he was far too introverted. We were breathing life and mystery and we were fascinated by lots of things, the guys were counting the number of musicians wearing long shorts and very small brands. Besides, we were far from the others: we were squatting on the damp platforms. The 'Aries Children' wore trench coats or black square glasses: they were hard-core. Zartan was Alan Cook's disciple: for him this show was a project. They thought Orbetello was an alien planet. And the Barbarians were theorizing about the Holy Grail with a filmmaker friend of theirs, the Indifferent Criticism Guy. All for ticket prices of 2 franks a night. The Barbarians were sitting on the rails of the magic carpet while we were smoking on the foetal position because of the intense vibrations. I don't remember it now except as a multitude of impressions very powerful for me: for example, how beautiful the cellophane was. I think that's why I believed

The Penguin islands were once beautiful sprawling cities. But no longer. Today they lie in ruins haunted by an unspeakable evil. On the eve of World War I, the German army occupied the islands and the British fought to reclaim them. The victor would rule the globe.
