It also places a greater emphasis on player creativity, with the ability to use these actions to create free kicks, scoring chances, and counter-attacks. Improved passing dynamics, thanks to a brand new physics-based passer AI and more intelligent and responsive ball control, deliver a real benefit to the development of advanced play. This means that tactics can be thought up and executed in real-time on the pitch. This is coupled with the introduction of the "Last Man Standing" system, which allows you to create more passing options and dictate the flow of play in matches. Last Man Standing can be used with the controlled player from the last pass, who can shift over and fall-back while the off-ball player continues with play. The "Last Man Standing" system also means that players can create space for themselves by drifting outside of the ball, pressuring their opponent and then sprinting back into the space the ball should have created. Players will also now also more frequently join in dribbling sequences in order to retain possession. Developing the ball-kicking system has been the key to this development. Couple this with a new contextual kick indicator that reacts to various scenarios, including deep defending and general game-state, and there is a more intuitive way to co-ordinate kick-offs. Intelligence in possession The game has also seen a host of improvements to defensive play. Utilising the position of opposition players when defending against dribbles has been a key feature. To help this, players' situational awareness has been improved, with improved player tracking, and more responsive AI. Moves to improve passing have also been made, including the addition of the "weak-side Passer" who can help the player play out from the back for a more proactive passing game. Improvements have also been made in marking players with multiple individuals, with more traditional marking systems now being used to mark players whilst attacking or pressing. Marking the "weak-side Passer" in the marking process also helps the player avoid pressure. Full-backs Full-backs have been heavily boosted in FIFA 22, with a new "verticality" feature added which ensures they are better able to keep opponents at bay when in possession. They are also placed in more attacking positions in order to help full-backs join in with attacking play, and to ensure they play a key role in the build-up to the

Features Key:

- New Teammate AI; Intelligent intelligence in combined football behaviour and awareness, comprehension and movement. Players who already have a teammate more will recognise when you pass an opponent in space and more likely to react.
- New animation system, more animations, more speed – driven by motion capture technology. Combine that with the new real-time animation system which describes the movement of over 100 visible body parts on the pitch.
- Introducing "HyperMotion Technology," which utilizes motion capture data collected from 22 NFL players playing a complete, high-intensity football match. The data includes all of a player's on-ball and off-ball behaviours. The technology drives an authentic and immersive football experience.
- AI goalkeepers make full-field saves, fights to make a save and play the ball out of danger.
- Intelligent depth data-based defensive AI, make smart defensive decisions and react to ball possession.
- New simulation-level ball physics.
- Intelligent AI scanning build-up, plan their attack from multiple angles, with a sophisticated understanding of the defensive side of the pitch.
- New dribbling controls.
- Tactics and new finishers features.
- MLS, La Liga & Bundesliga, Spanish Super Cup, Champions League Leagues, La Liga, Bundesliga, English Premier League, Russian Premier League, Ligue 1, Brazilian Serie A, Primera Division, German Bundesliga
