The number "6" will occur frequently in the text. It is not clear whether it means a number of old number, or it can be read both ways.The number will also help in showing the intent of this research, which is the preservation of rare documents, naturally because they will have an added value, but also because they are essentially different from the "encyclopedias" and "chronicles" of our time. To my knowledge, the sources of the writing of 1st century BC, who were still alive in 1140-1160, were lost in the late Middle Ages; therefore the very existence of these documents is a testimony to a loss that still affects us today.
