Github 12-16-2017, 05:00 AM Where do we think the world will be in 100 years? Either full of resource wars, where national boundaries don't matter, or all united under a single world-government (e.g. president or president elect). Whoever ends up winning will most likely look very different from how countries are now. --- Youtube: www.youtube.com/patrickevin FB: patrickevin]]> Fri, 16 Dec 2017 13:58:50 +0000 Copyright

This is a simple write-up about Electronic Arts decision to issue MORE than a million copyright strikes...

Electronic Arts just gave me a strike on YouTube for this "Ruling Britannia" video. I am outraged! I think EA is a bunch of retards.

EA recently struck one of my videoblogs after a 3rd party hacker or publisher realized that one of my many videos featured him in 3 different videos.

1) If you have talked about something in "published" form

Knife Hit Dash: This is a new exciting arcade from the studio D1ONE, in which you have to demonstrate skill in throwing knives. At each level, your task is to plunge all the knives into a spinning wooden base. With each new level of knives will become more and you will have to try to use every free space. Break apples to unlock new types of knives. Q: What is the material behind this LEGO problem? I am learning some basic theory for creating 3d models in Blender but I think I am too beginner for doing that yet, so I am trying to do it with what I have. Please check out the image below: My questions are: What is the material this model was made with? How to create my own material to accomplish this look? A: I assume it was made with Z-Wall, a gradient brick. The amount of brick used is simply a matter of "trial and error". The yellow wall behind the school is there to give the wall some color to the brick. I actually took a picture of it in a weak diffuse color. If you want to recreate this set, you will need a 3D printer for the bricks. To create a material in blender, use the "grey color to metal" node. 1. Field of the Invention This invention pertains to pin-related electrical circuitry. More particularly, this invention pertains to protective circuitry for semiconductor pin devices such as pins of a BGA package. 2. Description of the Prior Art BGA (Ball Grid Array) packages provide a way to package a greater number of pins on a package than would otherwise be available on a package of a given size. Typically, BGA packages include an array of smaller solder balls in the bottom area of the package, generally referred to as the array area, and a larger, solder ball area at the top of the package. The smaller array solder balls provide the electrical connection to a printed circuit board, and the larger solder balls provide a physical connection with the package (that is, a ball-grid array). Ball grid arrays are more common than pin grid arrays because they are less expensive to make. The BGA package has a number of pins, typically ranging from as few as sixty to as many as twelve hundred, which are typically spaced at about one millimeter center-to-center on the pin itself. Pins are typically received in holes in a printed c9d1549cdd

About This Game "Project Aura is set in a near future in which it is possible to colonise vast distances of space on Earth. You play as a colonist, a man who will be one of the first to explore and settle a new space. You will start with a number of scientists, programmers and other specialists on a spaceship. You are heading to Alpha Centauri, the nearest star to Earth. You will find a small planet inhabited by four people; the creators of Project Aura. The creators will let you fly their spaceship, and will teach you all you need to know. After three weeks of travel, you will arrive at your destination and the journey will officially start. On your journey, you will collect all the colonists you need. This is when you will start building a base on the planet and, eventually, will create a new world for yourself."If you've been reading the reports on Tom Brady this offseason, you'll know he wasn't real happy with the play of the receiver position during Super Bowl LIII. He didn't think that the Patriots offensive gameplan was the reason they lost and, you know, that may be true. It doesn't mean there wasn't a ton of work on the line of scrimmage to enable the passing game or that tight end Rob Gronkowski wasn't the most productive tight end in the league this season. It just means the receivers got very little help. They rarely were bailed out by having the ball hit a Patriots defender in the hands and run the other direction. That's a statistic that has been on the rise for five years. In 2008, after four quarters, the Steelers had the ball away from the Buccaneers 11 more times than Tampa Bay. The next year, the Steelers were within five more possessions of the Bucs (six), the Patriots (seven) and the Broncos (five). In 2009, it was nine. In 2010, it was 14. In 2011, it was 19. Last year, when the Patriots sacked Brady 14 times, the Buccaneers sacked him only eight. How did receiver DeAndre Hopkins go from the 11th overall pick in 2014 to a year ago with a season-ending injury? He didn't. While many teams are interested in trading for Hopkins, his injury has cleared him to make a full recovery and it's good to see the hard work finally pay off. Hopkins was Houston's No. 1 receiver at one point, but he was passed by Will Fuller who was now their No. 1. While the Texans of Distributions My repulsion to Chinese culture has forced me to research similar repulsions to mine. I've delved into a deep history of information/media access gaps and censorship, and found a few interesting "ideology" ruins out there. I posit that one of the main reasons we go through them is because they give us hours of recreation. Researching "how to research" on any given topic for science/engineering gives me hours of recreation -- just as hunting down information on the libretto for a certain piece of music that I love does. Introducing the Posterous My experience with academia has had one incident of new, super cool, "in my hands in a week" electronic media that has stuck (following the magnitude of an earthquake). I have found the platform cleverly sucks its way into the soul and stays forever. I share the following image for posterity. It has been far too long since I posted here. This is a photo of the posterous "influencer page". Incidence of eye complications in long-term ophthalmologists versus non-ophthalmologists in a rural eye practice. To compare the prevalence of major ophthalmic complications (ie, dry eye, cataracts, glaucoma, and age-related macular degeneration [AMD]) and of ocular surface diseases between rural long-term ophthalmologists and primary care physicians. Eye examinations of 241 patients were evaluated and compared by study of ophthalmologists and other physicians. The mean duration of practice by ophthalmologists was 16.0 years, and the mean number of patients examined per week was 52.5. The mean duration of practice by non-ophthalmologists was 5.6

years. The mean number of patients examined per week was 32.8. The prevalence of eye disease between physician groups was compared by chi(2) test and logistic regression analysis. The prevalence of ocular dryness ($P = 0.002$), visual field loss ($P = 0.021$), and cataracts ($P = 0.032$) were significantly higher in patients examined by long-term ophthalmologists than non-ophthalmologists. This was so in both univariate and multivariate logistic regression analysis after adjusting for age and gender. There was no difference in the prevalence of glaucoma ($P = 0.295$) and AMD ($P = 0.802$) by physician group. Eye complications are more common in patients examined by long-term ophthalmologists than by other physicians, suggesting an increased risk of disease in patients undergoing care in a rural eye clinic.
