ACLU: NSA's call tracking violates Constitution - ChrisArchitect ===== jgrahamc News.cnet.com has some of the oldest links on the Web. Here's an ACLU blog post (it's a bit dated) with more information domes... ~~~ eliottcarlson While it's a bit dated, news.cnet is actually pretty good these days in some ways. Its analytics are great, the news sections are good, and the source information is good. "It's time for the U.S. to enact statutes criminalizing acts of medical negligence, including quackery, and to regulate medical educators who publicly advocate quackery, including promoting discredited 'remedies' for autism." The ban, which takes effect Jan. 1, 1990, says that advertising unproven or harmful or fraudulent products "is unfair, deceptive and misleading in the same sense that it is illegal." It also forbids sales personnel from advocating a product's unproven and fraudulent use, or "where the unproven and fraudulent use of the product is also claimed to be 'essential for the prevention or treatment of disease.'" It is difficult to overstate the importance of the ruling. It represents, if you will, the nail in the coffin of the antivaccination movement. AD AD

According to the American Academy of Pediatrics, "Quackery" is: "The term used to refer to any intervention that purports to treat or prevent disease or injury using unproven or
