LEARN/CREATE (PT) NOTE: When the Idaho Legislature is in session, programming on the Learn/Create and World channels may be pre-empted for live coverage from the House and Senate floors. 5:00 pm Wallbuilders"The Vanishing Debate" For those who want to end the wasteful debate over whether to build expensive new roads, bridges, and tunnels, "The Vanishing Debate" investigates design professionals and political leaders who agree there is only one way to solve America's ever-growing transportation problems: build more roads. The program features Byron Burch, a design scientist from the University of Texas at San Antonio, whose compelling case that there are better, cheaper, and smarter ways to design and build roads is helping to generate new ideas that can bridge the political divide. D 5:30 pm Burt Wolf: The World of Wilderness"Flowers and Bats" It's the Amazon in full flower season, and a bat returns to Burt to learn more about a full moon cycle and to show him how flowers create the complexity and diversity of the planet's ecosystems. One with the moon cycle, the bat emerges at the right time of the year and in the right place to complete the food chain. D Sara's Weeknight Meals"Indian" Sara's family is from the West, and a large variety of Indian and Indian-influenced foods are available. So, while the weeknight cooking doesn't have to be inauthentic, it can be if it's done right! This week, Sara starts with a bang - a chicken biryani that tastes great with rice or potatoes. D 8:00 pm Michael's Cooking Show"A New Way to Cook: More Fast Food, Less Fuss" When it comes to fast food, the answer is in the cooking, not the eating. So from chicken nuggets to wings, the secrets to make them melt in your mouth, not in your fist, and then to jazz them up with flavors like garlic and vinegar. D 8:30 pm Mexico -- One Plate at a Time with Rick Bayless"Tijuana and the Heart of Mexico" Rick and his crew visit Tijuana's best example of art deco architecture and gourmet food in Old Town to dine at one of the best Mexican restaurants in the world -- the upscale Palacios. Involvement of multi-gene systems in the response of Arabidopsis thaliana to dehydration. Plants can withstand dehydration stress through a variety of mechanisms, including changes in gene expression, mainly induced by dehydration stress transcription factors (TFs). In the model plant Arabidopsis thaliana, only a few TFs have been identified and studied. In this work, expression profiles of all TFs in Arabidopsis under dehydration stress condition were identified using a stress-related TF array, and the functions of these TFs in Arabidopsis under dehydration stress condition were explored. Two transcriptional regulatory systems, the MYB and WRKY systems, play crucial roles in the response to dehydration stress in Arabidopsis, and these TFs are regulated by dehydration stress TFs. The WRKY family can regulate the expression of the MADS box gene, which is involved in the regulation of floral formation, stem cell proliferation, and vegetative development. The WRKY TFs can also regulate protein kinases, which are a part of a signal transduction pathway in response to stresses. The MYB TFs function in the regulation of phenylpropanoid biosynthesis, phytoalexin biosynthesis, and the regulation of cell wall biosynthesis. The MYB TFs can also regulate the gene expression of alkaline phosphatases, which function in the response to dehydration stress. The WRKY and MYB systems can regulate the expression of desiccation-related genes. The WRKY TFs are activated by the MYC/MYB basic helix-loop-helix (bHLH) TFs to regulate target gene expression. The expression of the desiccation-related gene, LEA3, is regulated by the WRKY TFs. This study suggests that the MYB and WRKY systems may play an important role in the response of Arabidopsis to dehydration stress. The results provide further evidence that the MYB and WRKY systems are involved in the response of Arabidopsis to dehydration stress.# Event 4962 - SetupProfiler
