About the game Three young and brilliant scientists are experimenting on the secret resources of the planet Puppetonia. The worlds ecosystem is destroyed as a result. In an attempt to restore the ecosystem, they have developed a huge colossus, a spectacular creation which resembles a dinosaur. The beautiful and sophisticated colleague Angloruth sends the group for an important assignment. One of the scientists goes missing from the laboratory, and is not found anywhere. The trio decides to explore the planet, for the sake of knowing what happened to the missing man. But things get really weird. The scientists begin to search and not find, but create, beings which are as much like them as like the microscopic creatures. After many confrontations, they eventually find the missing man in the middle of a mountain, and are faced with a horrifying creature which looks like the monster of the nursery rhymes. This creature is called Golem, and is composed of rocks and dull metal. The golem is as strong as 300 dolls. Once the golem has been defeated, the group must begin to escape from it. They find themselves in a small village which was once inhabited by a mysterious race of stone people, similar to ants. But the whole village is now deserted. Its inhabitants fled a terrible fate, knowing in advance that they

What's new:

Keene! Now that Dynamite has a new line of comics available, with new books by Jim Starlin, Alex Keene, John Arcudi, Robert Morrell, and others, the gamble paying off big time for the publisher. From the time of its successful launch, the line has been targeting comics publishing as the new star of the realm. The new book, Something Wicked, is an epic with a storyline that's every bit as rich as Starlin's cosmic tales. Alex Keene in particular, is a brilliant mind, and his book Skeleton Crew is also a real standout. Book (and publisher) we left off talking to at Comic Con 2003, and I just loved talking to him. It's an interview transcript of our conversation at the show. Jeff: Thank you very much for coming in. Today is Wednesday, so how's your day been so far? Alex: Haven't done much yet, just settling in. Jeff: This is your seventh or eighth time coming to Comic Con? Alex: I think I'll be doing this for a long time, probably at least two or three years. Jeff: Nice to have you. Since we've gotten off track just a little bit, what's something that most people haven't known about you before today? Alex: I have three different world competitive marks for the shot put. Jeff: Wow. I guess that you can say you're one of the few people who can say you have three of them. Alex: That's true. That'd have been pretty hard to have paid attention to for an hour in high school. I don't know if you want to know how we found out we did that, but we found out about it when I had a million shot put bars. I had to go online and find out if there was a shot put record and sure enough I have three. There was a lot of things like that. We were just driving around looking for space that we were in that we liked, and that turned out to be this interesting convention. Jeff: You couldn't really say you're a comic book fan, but then you're writing comics, which is like winning a gold medal and the Heisman Trophy. Alex: Yes, absolutely. Jeff: You've got three different series going on right now: Something Wicked, Skeleton Crew, and Hush. Could you share a little bit with our readers about

Over 2 full-length games: I. MAGES.: The Awakening and II. MAGES.: The curse and the cure. What else could you ask for? Ok, one more thing - no more teasing plagues! "I'm Dr. Allula Morris, a virologist. Or, more commonly, a cryovore. My specialty is the extraction of pathogens from frozen hosts. "Humans, rodents, yes, no problem. But what about vampires? "I'll tell you what I'll do. I'll extract all the material, ship it out, and in turn, you'll guarantee I'll be paid. But. All I ask is your life in exchange for mine. I don't care if the humans survive. Or the werewolves. Or the vampires. They're all vampires. " III. MAGES.: The Ashes of Immortality is the first game in this saga. Featuring the main protagonist - a woman named Alina Crane, who is betrothed to a werewolf named Orlov, she finds herself wandering in a mysterious world where immortals are commonplace - which apparently, can't live as long as humans - and where a terrible pandemic has broken out, leading to the deaths of billions. Key Features: The main game is split into two parts, "I" and "II", and features two different stories, where events drive you to the next chapter of your story: "I" and "II". Each character has a unique skill - for example, Alina has the power to sense, Orlov has the strength, and so on. A blend of turn-based and combat-oriented. Includes commentary in English and Russian. The character development system offers a chance to win the game even after defeating the main villain. More than 30 dialogues and almost a dozen of not-so-nice-things played by Samuel L. Jackson. Main Characters: *Alina Crane - a beautiful heiress of the Crane family, related to the 4th vampire King. She is betrothed to Orlov, a werewolf and a friend. "I love werewolves. They're the closest thing to humans I've seen since I was turned. And while I'm here, I'm not going to let people turn me again. They're too damned selfish, the humans. Not to mention they're overrated in every other way imaginable." *Orlov -
