An immunohistochemical study of a case of porcine epidemic diarrhea with reference to the time course of the infection. An immunohistochemical study of a case of acute disease due to PED virus was made in the small intestine of a pig. The first sign of PED virus was apparent in the epithelial cells of villi at 11 days postinoculation. The virus was inoculated into the small intestine through the rete peculiaris of the duodenum as the route of virus inoculation. The virus affected not only the epithelial cells of the small intestine, but also the crypt cells of the crypt and mesenchyme. PED virus at 14 days postinoculation was detected in the crypt cells of crypt and the infiltrating mononuclear cells of the lamina propria and mesenchyme, and even in the epithelial cells of villi. In the villi, the virus seemed to be restricted to the epithelial cells of the villi and many infiltrating cells were detected. The virus was detected at 21 days postinoculation in the interstitium of the muscular layers and in the epithelial cells of the duodenum, jejunum, ileum and colon. The virus was detected in the epithelial cells of the villi and in the crypt cells of the crypt and epithelium at 28 days postinoculation. The virus was detected in the epithelial cells of the villi and the infiltrating cells of the lamina propria at 35 days postinoculation. From these findings, it was considered that severe damage to the small intestine occurred at 21 days postinoculation and that damage to the epithelial cells of the villi and other cells progressed thereafter, probably due to invasion of the virus into the virus-inoculated pig in an attempt to proliferate and replicate.

1. Field of the Invention The present invention relates to a fixing device of a printer, a copier, a facsimile apparatus or the like, and more particularly, to an image forming apparatus provided with an external guiding means to guide a sheet of paper or recording medium supplied from a sheet supply device to a fixing device.

2. Description of the Related Art Conventionally, there has been proposed such a fixing device as to fix a toner image formed on a sheet by feeding the sheet to a pressure-contact portion of a pair of rollers including a heating roller and a press roller as pressing means

The authors report the results of the first study to compare the effectiveness of the combination of granulocyte colony-stimulating factor (G-CSF) and antilymphocyte globulin (ALG) in treating aplastic anemia (AA) in Chinese. From 1998 to 2002, 44 patients (20 males and 24 females) with a median age of 39 years (range 8-72 years) were enrolled in the study. All patients had AA. First, AA was confirmed by bone marrow aspirate and/or biopsy. Second, all patients were given the combination of G-CSF and ALG. The dosages of G-CSF and the combination therapy were selected individually according to the bone marrow biopsy. Third, peripheral blood chimerism was detected. Fourth, all patients received the myeloablative regimen (the total TBI dose was not lower than 8 Gy and cyclophosphamide was not used), and patients with platelets (PLT) 10 µg/kg was the best predictor of a successful outcome. Conclusion: The combination of G-CSF and ALG achieved high remission rate and safely sustained a stable PLT recovery in most responding patients. It can become a standard treatment for Chinese patients with AA.

Coal-fired power plants, located generally in the United States, and more recently in the developing world, have become large users of sulfur sorbents such as calcium hydroxide and magnesium hydroxide. These materials have been found to be economical in that they are relatively inexpensive and provide equivalent sorption capacities to
