From the beginning, the newsletter was "not just an ad in which you got a haircut for five bucks but a vital community publication that began... to give voice to the majority of the town's hardworking small businesses." The newsletter folded after 29 years when Stell retired from her job as a reporter and the burgeoning pressure of being in business demanded more of her time and resources. She moved to Florida in 2014. The newsletter started at Stell's time and place of business, Our Waterfront Kitchen, located in one of the hardest working corners of historic Downtown Minneapolis. When she retired, Judy Stell moved her kitchen from Riverside to its current address in Canoga Park, California. What she found was the newsletter, in two boxes of articles dating back to 1989, under various names she had used over the years and was unable to locate in her previous office. She brought it home and typed the majority of the articles from her memory and those of her employees. If Judy's memory failed her in any way, her extensive network of professional and personal friends in the restaurant, catering, and food coding business helped her fill in any missing blanks. "When I opened Our Waterfront Kitchen in 1980, I was a reporter for the local newspaper who had once worked in the advertising department of the Minneapolis Star. I had no marketing experience or knowledge of the restaurant business. What I had was a passion for good food and good writing." She knew she had found the answer to both. In our rapidly changing society, cooking, in one form or
