I asked for a bigger room and they gave me one smaller than the one we had booked and with no heating. Cons: Very disappointed with this hotel, the room was tiny and the carpet was torn on the floor. There was a very high noise level from the foyer. No air conditioning - very hot and noisy. The bed was small for a king size - not comfy. Breakfast was OK for a continental breakfast but no bread Cons: the no-shower, loos, with only one sink in the room! No.shower was not working, linen should not be laid on the towel rack! Cons: Room was very cold (not connected to heater). Hot water ran out after I used half of it.

Circulating endogenous estrogens have a protective role in cardiovascular disease (CVD). The aim of our study was to evaluate the effect of exogenous estradiol on cardiovascular risk factors in postmenopausal women with metabolic syndrome. This study included 6-month estradiol replacement therapy in postmenopausal women with metabolic syndrome. We excluded from the trial subjects with conditions known to affect the circulatory system (severe systemic or arterial hypertension, cardiomyopathy, angina pectoris, myocardial infarction, stroke or thromboembolism). Estrogen treatment reduced apolipoprotein B-48, triglyceride and LDL-cholesterol concentrations, in parallel with a decrease of total and free testosterone. In contrast, estradiol induced a significant increase of HDL-cholesterol concentrations and of the non-transferrin bound iron (NTBI) level. No changes in high sensitivity C-reactive protein, fibrinogen, homocysteine, hemoglobin, creatinine and coagulation variables were recorded. There were no cases of thromboembolism or adverse cardiovascular events during therapy. Estrogen replacement therapy, even for a short period of time, in postmenopausal women with metabolic syndrome may be beneficial in terms of change in lipid profile and on iron metabolism, suggesting that this kind of treatment could be beneficial in CVD prevention. As our plucky hero, you begin your quest to travel the world with your piggish companions bouncing around and being adorable... Thursday, February 19, 2014 Hmm. These are the thoughts of many of us who make games. Kids are happier, most likely than we are, and games capture that imagination and keep it going. There was a time, maybe 5 to 10 years ago, before it became the "cool thing" and now it's expected of us as game makers. I was pretty happy with the limited attention that the original Slime Kingdom 1 got and I was happy to see the game reach its 5 year anniversary. So I decided to give this one a go. I figured it's been about 7 years since the first release, perhaps it's time to see where it can go now that I've added a lot of updates for it. You can find the original game online or on Google Play. The first thing you'll see are a few pictures of our plucky hero. The original hero was a girl who had a friend who a boy who liked her. The main gameplay for that is the same. Your main job is to have some side-scrolling platforming action with the ability to bring that friend of hers along. You can have up to 3 player local multi-touch (1 player local multi-touch is still available). There's a new character concept in the game. The only enemy in the game is time. The gameplay is fun. There's a new set of levels. The artwork is cute and not too gaudy. We've gone with a more funky mood. What the game has managed to do is make me realize a couple of things. It's released something that has managed to not only appeal to me as a game developer, but it's not something that gets boring after just 10 minutes. The current game, in my opinion, appeals to all ages. The good thing about Slime Kingdom is it doesn't appeal so much to one as it does to many. One of the things that I've noticed about game building is you can't use the same game design for your life. You don't start to get tired of the game. If a game developer could make a game that would wear out after 20 minutes they'd make more money. I've got some other cool features. Here's a song I wrote for the game

What's new:

More than a decade after cancelled plans to commence operations, seven 4BIG electric multiple unit trains entered service on the Trenitalia Thello service on 22nd September 2014. Since then, the 4BIG have been slowly introduced into the busy Venice-Pula service, operating on the Emperor Joseph II service between Palmanova, Venice and Gorizia, or Venice and Pola/Pustertal. Since the initial introduction, this train has shown obvious improvements due to its planned upgrade - the notable improvements include a more easily accessible crew-compartment for the drivers; the introduction of fully automated driver/brake control; and an extension of the train's length. In total, there are 7 4BIGs in Venice's fleet and an additional 3 in its sister service Pustertal. I recently received a copy of add-on model 72350, 'BR Class 422 '4BIG' EMU, which I have installed on a fully self-fabricated 150 cm-long baseplate. I will therefore be taking a look at this bogie-adapted locomotive, and its history. The model is intended to be run on a 0.06:1 Train Simulator locomotive, but given a wider gauge of 4 mm, the seating areas are slightly larger than the standard 2.60 m-long layout. The narrower spaces are accommodated between the seats and the centre table, which some folks may like better. When you look the model from above, the amount of detail isn't seen to be extravagant - the paint scheme is in a believable mid-1970s livery, with a more marshall (diesel styled) bodyside. Given the nature of the model, I'm a little out of my element. I started building the model due to the error in my model of the Class 66 I posted prior to Christmas. This model was a more simple effort to get the details right. While there have been many fine modellers active on the SteamBits forum in the last few years, my actual experience in that area is admittedly patchy. I've already ordered some more copy of '4BIG'; suffice to say, there aren't too many variations amongst them. From what I've read, one was present at the 'Grand Prix of Locos' exhibition at the Repsol

Many players are familiar with Trolls by now. Trolls are most commonly used for Treasure hunts in various role-playing games; this is precisely what the trolls in this game are good at. Instead of going for monster treasure, the Trolls' goal is to "roll" for players. Having themselves captured by evil Humans, the Trolls are now powerless. While they are trying to find a way back to their home and family, a rescue squad is brought in on the request of the Humans. But can these Humans and the rescued Trolls really help each other out? Features: 6 unique Trolls with 4-player coop modes on 6 unique maps Game modes: Classic: A normal free-for-all with 7 minutes of game time per round Classic+: A free-for-all with 3 minutes of game time per round and 10 players Classic+ Clash: A free-for-all with 3 minutes of game time per round and 6 players Special: A free-for-all with 3 minutes of game time per round Platform: PC Developer: id Game Studio Publisher: id Game Studio Gameplay: Trolls are full of tricks. They have a huge variety of hand-crafted moves to be used against their opponents. Your job is to use the moves you think will work. Then try them out on one of the many Trolls and find out if they are true. Trolls are also not particularly friendly. For example they might not only knock down their opponents, but they can also touch them, even choke them. Once you've found a move that works, you can use it to win the round. Try to get a move that really fits the situation you are in. With 6 unique Trolls, 8 Player Coop and 4 Player Coop and 6 exclusive unique maps, there is something for everyone. Online-
