But there are pitfalls as well. In this QuickTips expert reveals how to leverage it to communicate better within and outside your team. I'd like to say I've had experience doing this, but in fact, not a single time. I remember a co-worker who went through training with a great emphasis on recording his notes, because he was determined not to have a memory lapse. Because I needed that record for a different reason, we got along just fine. I don't think he would have been all that interested in talking about the training program to me. During the year, I attended a couple of different sales-training programs, and based on my experience with those groups of people, I believe they are all avoiding this topic for fear of not being deemed good enough in their jobs. They're right to be afraid. All employees have potential for becoming great. In the course of 6d1f23a050
