sign a free trade agreement with Morocco soon. The European Commission's trade chief Cecilia Malmstroem said on Tuesday that the deal would be a "very positive step". Spain sees economic opportunity from the deal, and has welcomed Morocco's openness to the deal. "A broad-based and balanced trade agreement with Morocco would strengthen European trade in the North African country which ranks 24th in the world in terms of exports to Europe," said a statement released on behalf of the Spanish foreign office by its spokesman Luis Miguel Villar Mir. After the deal, “we will ensure that the opportunities created for both trade partners are optimised,” it added. And although it brought no surprises, a recent statement by the EU agricultural chief Andrus Ansip appeared to give a sense of how the deal would work. “The agreement will include agri-food sectors that are of importance to both parties, such as textiles, shoes, tobacco and spirits. It will also be inclusive and sensitive to environmental concerns,” the commission’s trade chief said. Morocco is already in talks with the EU on a digital trade deal. On Tuesday, the Moroccan king broke the news of the trade deal between the two and EU officials. Now the ball is in the EU’s court. “We will begin negotiations with Morocco on a conclusion of the free trade agreement in the framework of the WTO,” said Malmstroem. The trade commissioner told a news conference that the deal was crucial to encourage investment and help boost jobs in a region where
