the company, which has also scaled back some of its direct-to-consumer initiatives, announced on monday that it has agreed to sell playboy enterprises to a group led by canadian billionaire, michael wekerle, in a deal valued at $1.15 billion. in a statement released by playboy enterprises, wokerle said he would continue as the company's ceo. "i'm humbled and honored by the confidence this board has placed in me. we will continue to build on the strong foundation that has been set over the past several years," wekerle said. the program is also being distributed in limited theaters, which are required by the distributor to only show the series in a designated theater and not ancillary locations. rizvi traverse, which has owned the company since 2014, has been mulling an end to the magazine for awhile, but the decision came more quickly as the disruption of the coronavirus pandemic to content production and the supply chain became clearer and clearer, ben kohn, ceo of playboy enterprises, wrote in a medium post on wednesday. we were forced to accelerate a conversation we've been having internally: the question of how to transform our u.s. print product to better suit what consumers want today. the current cover features marilyn monroe along with the statement "what a way to go" and the date is april 1, 1953, the first issue of playboy. the magazine has not been the same since in circulation, and now playboy is only published in print once a year. in a reported interview, her husband, arthur miller, said he is "devastated" and "shell-shocked". he said the news had come as "a shock. what could i say?" to the media. he also said marilyn "was the one constant in our lives". the couple married in 1956 and divorced in 1961. 5ec8ef588b
