Samsung U2 Apcbu10bbe Driver

Really Big Switch Panel with 7 USB ports and 2 ports on another side. Very useful and easy to use. No drivers needed! Solar Panel on top is made by Pure Sunpower. Blue Energy House solar panel with 11.6Wp. Insulator and resistance can be removed. The Purple was taken out when I replaced the 22.2W. Black panels will come out next, but the panels are still with the motor inside. I noticed that the problems with my LED driver weren't just that the chip was dirty, but that it looked like someone had painted something over it. I decided to spray the whole thing with paint thinner and let it dry for a few days. After that I cleaned the board by hand with a cotton cloth, rubbing it over the solder connections in a gentle motion. As long as you do this one part at a time (which I found it best to do by starting in the middle and working your way towards the edge) you can avoid smearing and getting streaks in the insulation (especially if you do it by hand, instead of a heat gun). Then I just used a chisel and small hammer to pry the chip out of the board and take it to the station. Once the paint was all gone I was able to see that there was a marking on the chip that I didn't see before. I had a lot of trouble trying to get my soldering iron hot enough to melt the solder, but I eventually got the part out. Of course I have to keep in mind that I started with the chip underneath the red labels. Here's a quick video showing the whole process. If you were wondering why it looks like my soldering iron kept going out and then coming back on, it's because the solder gets really hot really fast and I didn't have much to do when I was trying to get hot solder. It usually goes off and then comes back on a second later. That or the solder gets hot and then cools down so the solder automatically flows. 5ec8ef588b
