We are a versatile team with strong experience in graphics, architecture and mod development. Our mod also consists of "regular" people with a passion for Rome and the game. The decision to bring us together was a natural one. It is, above all, the commitment of the team that has gained us the recognition we have achieved and the popularity we have enjoyed. When we are not working on the mod, we are seeking for other undertakings, always with the constant aim of making Rome II a better game. Part of the pRENAissance team, we've been playing Rome since the 1.1 times and eager to bring back the epic scale and campaigns of the past. Having spent time with the different editions of Total War Rome (even 1.4 for a while), we felt the time has come for a true sequel to Rome. After an extensive global research, we finally felt confident to start the "grand project". The immediate result was that, within the Church of Rome, he was known as a man of exceptional piety and of deep devotion to duties, a man who would enter into the most intimate friendships with the poor and with the most humble of his fellow-Christians. In 1656 he became bishop of Novara, but refused the cardinalate due to his dislike for Rome and he moved to Rome from which he was recalled by Pope Innocent XI, whose last years were marked by the conflicts with the grand duchess of Tuscany, a relative of his. The new pope entrusted him with two missions; to settle the quarrels between the peoples of Piacenza and Mantua, and to visit the nunciature at Vienna to console the unhappy princess - who was in the hands of the Turks and Prussians - on the death of her mother. In order to conduct negotiations between the various states and the Holy See, he appointed in 1661 papal nuncio at Brussels, and in the following year he was sent as legate to Ferrara, where he spent all the revenue of his see to relieve the poor and sick in his diocese. Nor did he neglect the spiritual needs of his flock. He restored some churches, restored the cloisters of the hospital, and built a large and attractive new church at Novara. During this time he was much honoured by his brother Cardinal Rinaldo, and the 'collection of saints', in which he was included, was dedicated to him. In fact, the sincerity of his piety was such that he was known to say: "I love my wife and children with the same love with which I love my God." "
