on the other hand, i can't deny i'm a bit obsessive in my search for "death drops" -- those unexpected upgrades that cause problems. so, i rolled up my sleeves and dove into the supporting documentation for the new service pack. and voila, a jewel fell into my hand: a web article that delineated how to do everything properly. essentially, microsoft sends out a list to the computer manufacturers of the individual fixes and patches for the newest service packs. if you use the windows update client, you will see a notification that the update is available and that you should download it from the microsoft web site. if not, simply right-click on the service pack package (usually a folder with a name like win2k-kbxxxx-xxxx.exe) and choose "update (manually)," and then follow the prompts. when you encounter this error, you should also visit the microsoft support web site for the service pack, download all the necessary files for your system (win2k-kbxxxx-xxxx.exe, win2k-kbxxxx-xxxx.msu), and copy the files to a thumb drive or cd. after that, you're in good shape. now that the system is patched, you can install the rest of the new features in windows 2000 service pack 4. these include drag-and-drop and printing improvements, the ability to use plug-and-play devices, a new web browsing helper tool, new file associations, and a program called outlook express. i've provided a link for you to purchase microsoft's hotfixes through the microsoft product key system. click the link below to start the process. you will be able to install and update your computer with full support from microsoft. 5ec8ef588b
