If you have a work item type that you don't use or no longer need TFS, you can destroy that type (along with all work items of that type): modality â† work item â† delete. Remember to use the "Delete" command if you want to destroy the type, not the work items from which it was created. You may need to do this because you want your source control system to work with one type of work item, but not other work item types. I did this now to disable the use of TFS for version control for me. I don't need this feature Something I'm completely lazy (or zazvezdil?).

Recently, I managed to change 4 jobs. And what is most interesting, they took me everywhere with pleasure. What am I all for? BUT! I really need a new client! Because while I'm waiting for him, I'll be working here. And I want to go where the new project will be. And I need to find a new customer very, very urgently. How to find? Yes, as usual. Advertising on avito, vk, youtube, insta, youtube channel (so you can definitely find it, because everyone already knows me). Eiii...
