Loading The final in the Star Wars Saga, The Last Jedi has sold 882,567 advance tickets on Fandango and MovieTickets.com, according to the StarWars.com website, with Disney claiming the new tally is the largest advance sales set for any film in history. As of early Monday morning Pacific time, the film had grossed $375 million domestically, putting it past the $343 million earned by Star Wars: The Force Awakens just a week after its release in December 2015. Earlier this month, Star Wars: The Last Jedi director Rian Johnson had told IGN his goal was to surpass the previous record for advance ticket sales. "I want to break it," he said. "And then I want to like, maybe beat it by a little bit," he said. In addition to those first two sets, The Force Awakens also smashed the previous advance ticket record set by Harry Potter And The Deathly Hallows Part 2. Fandango, which began allowing buyers to purchase tickets to the movie on December 7, 2015, also just updated its database, allowing users to see how that first day's ticket sales compared to the previous day's record.
