What we think about it: It's early days yet. While time spent in the app tells me it's working to the level of most other apps, I'm still waiting for it to feel as natural as it feels in other apps. But so far, it's looking good. What they say about it: "It's nice that it allows simultaneous editing from two people. I'm editing a picture with a friend and we can each see the same person, background, etc. and use the Smart Filters' ability to link the two rectangles to see the image with both of us editing together. It's easy to suggest a filter - and the abilities of third party filters, including my own, are easy to use. " What they say about it: "It's not the fastest app for a photo retouching workflow but it's certainly one of the most efficient. It gives you an easy path to getting to the desired look and, knowing Adobe, this path will only get easier with time." What we think about it: The app includes some really nice tools that we haven't seen in a while. They're designed to help you get a feel for all the tools and effects in the app without the usual step of going into a browser. However, they still need more speed and they need to be configured more easily. A long time ago, working in Lightroom 3 was a rather high barrier to entry. We needed to purchase and install the developer's version of the app and then wait for the official release to license. Both versions had flaws, but after installing the latest update, the latter problem is a thing of the past.
