If you are faced with the problem of a hard drive that won't work, you may be able to recover the data. The first thing you need to do is to back up the data. If you have a backup hard drive, you should make sure that it is in working order, and you back up your data to it regularly. If you do not have a backup hard drive, you can back the data up to a portable hard drive or a memory card. You should always make sure that you store all of your important data on a separate memory card or portable hard drive, and that it is stored separately from your main computer.
